CONESTEE MILL

"Our plans call for a mixed-use development of commercial and residential components that will highlight the Swamp Rabbit Trail while also being respectful of the history and heritage of the property," Weir said in a news release from WCM. "We look forward to announcing more in the coming weeks about the eateries and commercial partners who will be partnering with us to create a truly unique destination in Greenville County."

-Upstate Business Journal, March 21, 2017

LAKE CONESTEE NATURE PARK

"The park, six miles south of downtown Greenville, opened in 2007 after seven years of work to transform it from a polluted wasteland where wildlife had been virtually non-existent. The first phase involved putting a section of trails through the wetlands, and later a 4-mile section dubbed as an extension of the Swamp Rabbit Trail was opened. The extension doesn't connect, however, to the main trail that ends at Greenville Tech, with a one-mile stretch the city has struggled to link without the participation of the Greenville Country Club."

-Greenville News, July 20, 2018

HAMPTON STATION

"Hampton Station is described by its visionaries as "an entirely new concept for working and relaxing. A thriving space for some of Greenville's most innovative and exciting businesses. And, an exciting space for our community to enjoy, right in the urban heart of Greenville. A place that still, at its heart, is a group of friends." The tenants include the artisans of ArtUp Studios, several businesses, a brewery and a restaurant. The website says, "Hampton Station is Greenville's destination for you to be outside, enjoying food, drink, outdoor games, and the special services of cutting edge locally owned businesses."

-WYFF 4, October 17, 2017

MARKLEY STATION

"After two years of curating tenants for the Markley Station redevelopment in the West End, owners RealOp Investments are ready to unveil the three restaurant tenants that will be joining existing and future office users at 116-120 N. Markley St. Located in the spaces facing the courtyard of the 43,000-square-foot development will be Hoppin', a modern self-serve tap room out of Charlotte; Urban Wren, a new Greenville-based urban winery; and Todaro Pizza from Clemson."

-Upstate Business Journal, August 14, 2018

JUDSON MILL

"Once one of the largest mills in Greenville County, Judson Mill had been spinning raw cotton into yarn for more than a century. But when Milliken and Company listed the property for sale in 2015 and closed operations, everyone knew change was coming. The property was purchased last month with plans to convert the 36-acre mill into a live-work-play mixed-use district. Judson District will include 204 apartments, more than 215,000 square feet of office space, 141,000 square feet of light industrial/flex, and 8 to 12 acres of retail along Highway 123 (Easley Bridge Road), near St. Francis Hospital."

-Upstate Business Journal, November 15, 2017

SIMPSONVILLE DEVELOPMENT

"Simpsonville's growth is nothing new. Earlier this year, the city approved plans for five residential developments that included up to 550 residential units. The city's population has seen steady growth, increasing 49.3 percent from 2000 to 2017, according to information from the U.S. Census. If all the proposed development comes to fruition, the city's population could grow another 11 percent and break the 24,500 mark. City leaders have been careful lately to question developers on plans and what they mean for traffic on already-congested roads."

-Greenville News, August 8, 2018

MAULDIN DEVELOPMENT

"Hughes described the proposed village as an Internet-connected, environmentally friendly place where people could live, work, and play without having to drive anywhere in a car. "We will have music, events, festivals. It will be more than just a group of buildings," he told UBJ. "It will be the kind of place everyone wants to go." The village, if it materializes, would be an historic development for Mauldin. Mauldin Mayor Dennis Raines said the proposed village would be the city's biggest development since he became a resident 45 years ago."

-Upstate Business Journal, August 22, 2017

GREER DEVELOPMENT

"Thanks to the Investing in Opportunity Act, co-sponsored by Sen. Tim Scott, R-S.C., as part of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act passed in December 2017, the trillions of dollars U.S. investors currently hold in unrealized capital gains in stocks and mutual funds alone could be funneled straight back into the country's left-behind locales. Like, for instance, into downtown Greer, where the 286,000-square-foot historic former cotton mill built in 1908 sitting on 8.37 acres at 300 Connecticut Ave. recently sold for $1.4 million."
