Kennet place

The place to do better business

Kennet Place is a building with presence. Its warm stone and glass atrium offers a first impression that is welcoming and uplifting, promising a sophisticated experience that enhances commercial efficiency. This promise is delivered by the five floors of office space refurbished to the highest specification. Impressing without shouting, anticipating without pushing, Kennet Place considers the needs of all those who will be using this space. This is a building where people can enjoy life and work, where businesses can prosper and grow.

Known as the capital of the Thames Valley and increasingly recognised as the UK's high-tech centre, Reading is an economic powerhouse. It has everything a modern city needs, including a highly educated workforce and fast connections for travel nationally and internationally.

LEISURE AMENITIES

Step outside the doors of Kennet Place and you find yourself in landscaped gardens, where the trees and shrubs link between the stone, glass and brick of the surrounding buildings. It's a surprisingly leafy area, given that you are close to the centre of one of the UK's major towns. Reading is a place that brings together the old and the new, the traditional and the futuristic, the cultural and the scientific. Kennet Place fits naturally into this diverse environment.

It's a good place to take a stroll and get to know the local area, whether at lunchtime or relaxing after work. Right beside the canal with its narrow boats and the River Kennet that flows into the Thames, a short walk will take you to Forbury Gardens where the imposing Maiwand Lion provides one of Reading's most famous landmarks. These are public gardens on the site of the ancient Reading Abbey, and they lead on to the town centre with its rich mix of places to shop, eat, drink and be entertained.

The place to enjoy yourself

Reading is a bustling, lively town with an exciting concentration of entertainment possibilities in and around the centre. Here you will find all the big names of a European city plus a wide range of independent shops and restaurants. Places to wine and dine, places to watch a movie or listen to a concert, places to suit every taste.

So close to London, many journeys from Reading take people into the capital for all its easy-to-reach attractions – yet Reading itself welcomes 30,000 inbound commuters every day. This is a place that knows how to make people feel welcome, where people enjoy working and living, and where clients look forward to the experience as a visitor.

The place that's a magnet for growth

The region is now known as Thames Valley Berkshire, and Reading is its fast-growing capital. Reading's success has been built on its scientific and technological expertise, and this remains an important part of the city's character as well as that of the region. The University of Reading is in the world's top 1%, and it is in friendly rivalry and often in collaboration with Oxford University just a short journey away. Over 42% of the local population have been educated to degree level or above, one of the UK's highest figures, and most graduates stay locally to pursue careers.

As a result, Reading has three times the number of tech companies than average, and this figure continues to rise, making it the number one tech cluster in the UK. Over 600 telcos are based in Berkshire and there are growing sector clusters in energy and the environment as well as life sciences and healthcare. It creates a high-value knowledge economy. Companies coming into this infrastructure find their supply needs are already well-supported, with easy access to a skilled workforce, customers, partners and financial markets.

The place with the world on its doorstep

Reading Station

Even as the world becomes more digitally connected, the need strengthens for people and businesses to connect through face-to-face contact because relationships grow business. Travel is more essential than ever.

Reading is at the heart of the Thames Valley which makes it a prime location for communications in the UK, and from the UK to the world. Rail travel is central to Reading's success – it has the second busiest station outside London. Now the rail infrastructure is expanding even further with massive investments in new rail schemes, including the Elizabeth Line (Crossrail) and the Western Rail link to Heathrow project.

These developments worth £500 million will double train capacity in the coming years from an already high base of service – at present there are trains every four minutes into London. With the M4 and the motorway network less than 10 minutes away, Reading also provides excellent road links.

Reading is a transport hub for the UK but it is also exceptionally convenient for access to international air travel. Fast road and rail links to Heathrow and Gatwick airports, mean you connect with great ease from Reading to any other part of the world. Heathrow Airport serves 185 international destinations including 23 cities in the USA. Connections like these make Reading one of the world's rising locations, truly the place to do business.
