Oversized windows offer abundant natural light and views of the city skyline.

Leather-upholstered barstools line this pantry's perforated metal bar.

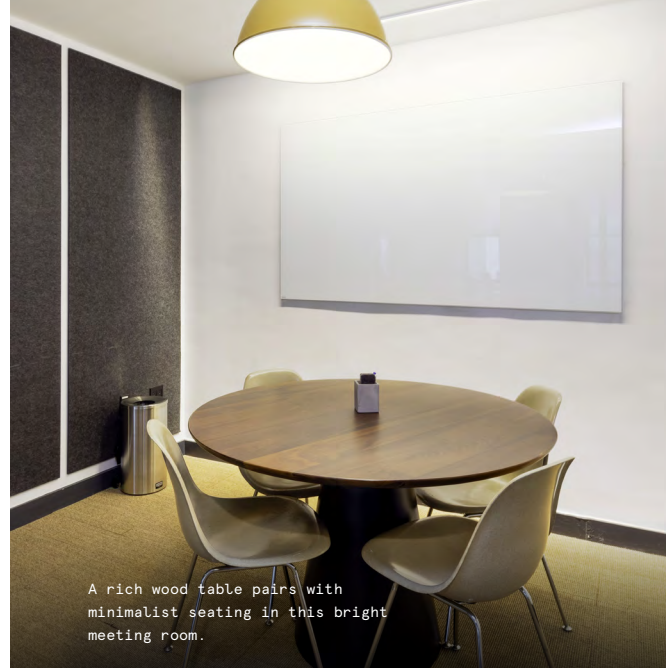

A historic workspace with modern flair

Originally built in 1925, 214 West 29th Street is a 17-story building in Manhattan's vibrant Chelsea neighborhood. Restorations have outfitted the space with open floor plans and modern amenities while maintaining the building's original character. WeWork occupies six floors in this historic property, the workspace features a mix of sun-drenched lounges, sleek private offices, and art-filled meeting rooms, all with striking views of the New York skyline.

Bold, bright, and inviting

Inspired by a fresh, open artist's loft, 214 West 29th Street combines industrial and natural materials with bold pops of color and pattern. A mix of modern furnishings, vintage-inspired accents, and graphic artwork and décor lends eclectic appeal to this light-filled space.

- Bright pops of color are featured throughout the space, with teal upholstery, pink ceiling ductwork, colored pendant lighting, and bright yellow elevator doors
- The mix of natural and manmade materials includes warm wooden furnishings, exposed ceilings, and hardwood and polished concrete floors
- Custom ceramic tile, terrazzo countertops, and glass block walls bring texture and polish to the common spaces

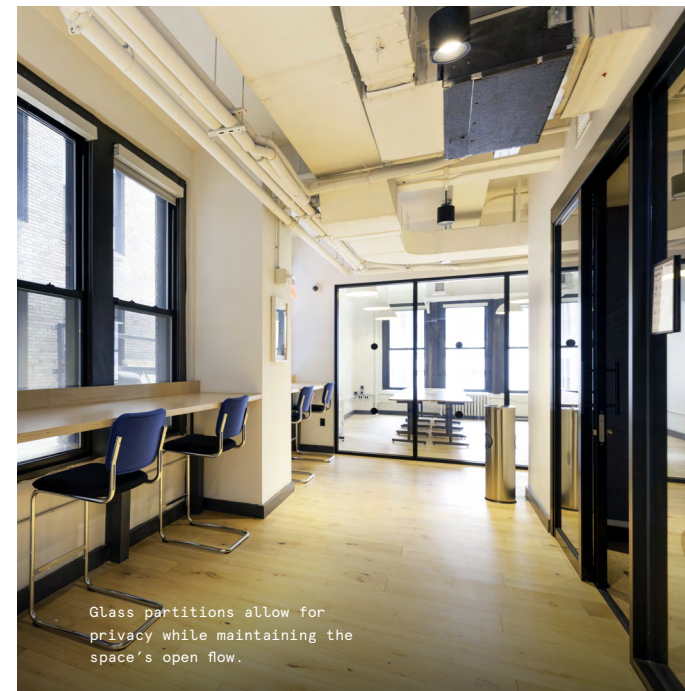

A rich wood table pairs with minimalist seating in this bright meeting room.

Private meeting rooms are perfect for brainstorming sessions and small team meetings.

Modern artwork and mid-century-inspired furnishings come together for retro-modern appeal.

Glass partitions allow for privacy while maintaining the space's open flow.

This eclectic lounge space features pendant lighting, colorful furnishings, and a glass block accent wall.

Custom ceramic tile and terrazzo countertops bring color and texture to this community pantry.
