Legendary 10-Acre Destination Property 45 Minutes from Pasadena

The only privately-owned property in the Angeles National Forest, adjacent to the region's best hiking, camping and mountain biking opportunities

Rich History

Built in 1939, Newcomb's Ranch is a roadhouse at 5,340 feet in elevation in the Angeles National Forest, near Los Angeles, and is the only private property along the Angeles Crest Highway (CA-2).

The property was settled by the Newcomb family, who also created the Mount Waterman ski area, using the Land Revision Act of 1891. Over the years it has served as a restaurant, hotel, general store, gas station, and brothel.

Own a Piece of History

Built in 1939, Newcomb's Ranch has served as a restaurant, hotel, general store, gas station, and brothel.

The Story of Newcomb's Ranch Inn

In 1888, an adventurous man visited Chilao* by the name of Louie Newcomb, a master trailblazer and cabin builder. Louie built his first cabin about a quarter mile Northeast of the present day Newcomb's Ranch. From this small, but cozy cabin, a steady stream of hunters, hikers and friends visited Louie.

A frequent guest and friend of Newcomb's was William "Sturdes" Sturtevant. A plan was hatched between the two to create a toll trail and charge users 25 cents. Louie spent years developing a trail from Sturde's Camp in the Upper Santa Anita Canyon leading into Chilao high country and beyond. The toll trail never really worked, as there was no way to patrol and collect fees from the many miles of trail.

Louie soon found an alternative occupation as one of the first Forest Rangers in the newly created "San Gabriel Timber Reserve". He served for 13 years, building many cabins and trails still used today. Eventually Louie Newcomb settled down, got married and bought a home in Sierra Madre. He sold most of his land to his cousin Lynn Newcomb Sr. in 1929, leaving the high country for good in 1940 feeling that the newly created Angeles Crest Highway "ruined the place".

Newcomb's Ranch Inn was built in 1939 and the ranch has changed many times over the last several decades, serving as a restaurant, brothel, hotel, general store and gas station. Much of the original two story structure was destroyed from a fire in 1976. The building was rebuilt and opened as a restaurant for many years by Lynn Newcomb Jr.

Today, Newcomb's Ranch is owned by Frederick H. Rundall, a lover of nature with a passion for the mountains. His father, Dr. Frederick Rundall, was an oncologist for 30 years in the Greater Los Angeles area who also had a deep passion for the San Gabriel Mountains and hiking.

* The region within Angeles National Forest where Newcomb's Ranch is located is known as Chilao.

Legendary Location

Newcomb's Ranch is well-known to car and motorcycle enthusiasts for its perfect setting along the Angeles Crest Highway's scenic and winding road.

"Angeles Crest Highway to Angeles Forest Highway to Upper Big Tujunga Canyon Road, back to Angeles Crest and up to Newcomb's Ranch near the crest of the San Gabriel Mountains, a total of 65 miles of some of the best roads in Southern California."
