Natural Environment & Regional Access

Tucson is the second-largest metropolitan area in Arizona, encompassing approximately 9,200 square miles within Pima County and supporting a regional population of more than 1.1 million residents. The metropolitan area includes established surrounding communities such as Oro Valley, Marana, Sahuarita, and Vail, which contribute to steady population and economic growth. Tucson is strategically located approximately 60 miles north of the U.S.–Mexico border, 110 miles southeast of Phoenix, 5 ½ hrs east of San Diego, 4 hrs west of El Paso, and approximately 6 hrs south of Albuquerque, providing convenient access across the Southwest region. The local economy is anchored by major employers including the University of Arizona, Raytheon Technologies, Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Banner Health, and a growing aerospace and biosciences sector.

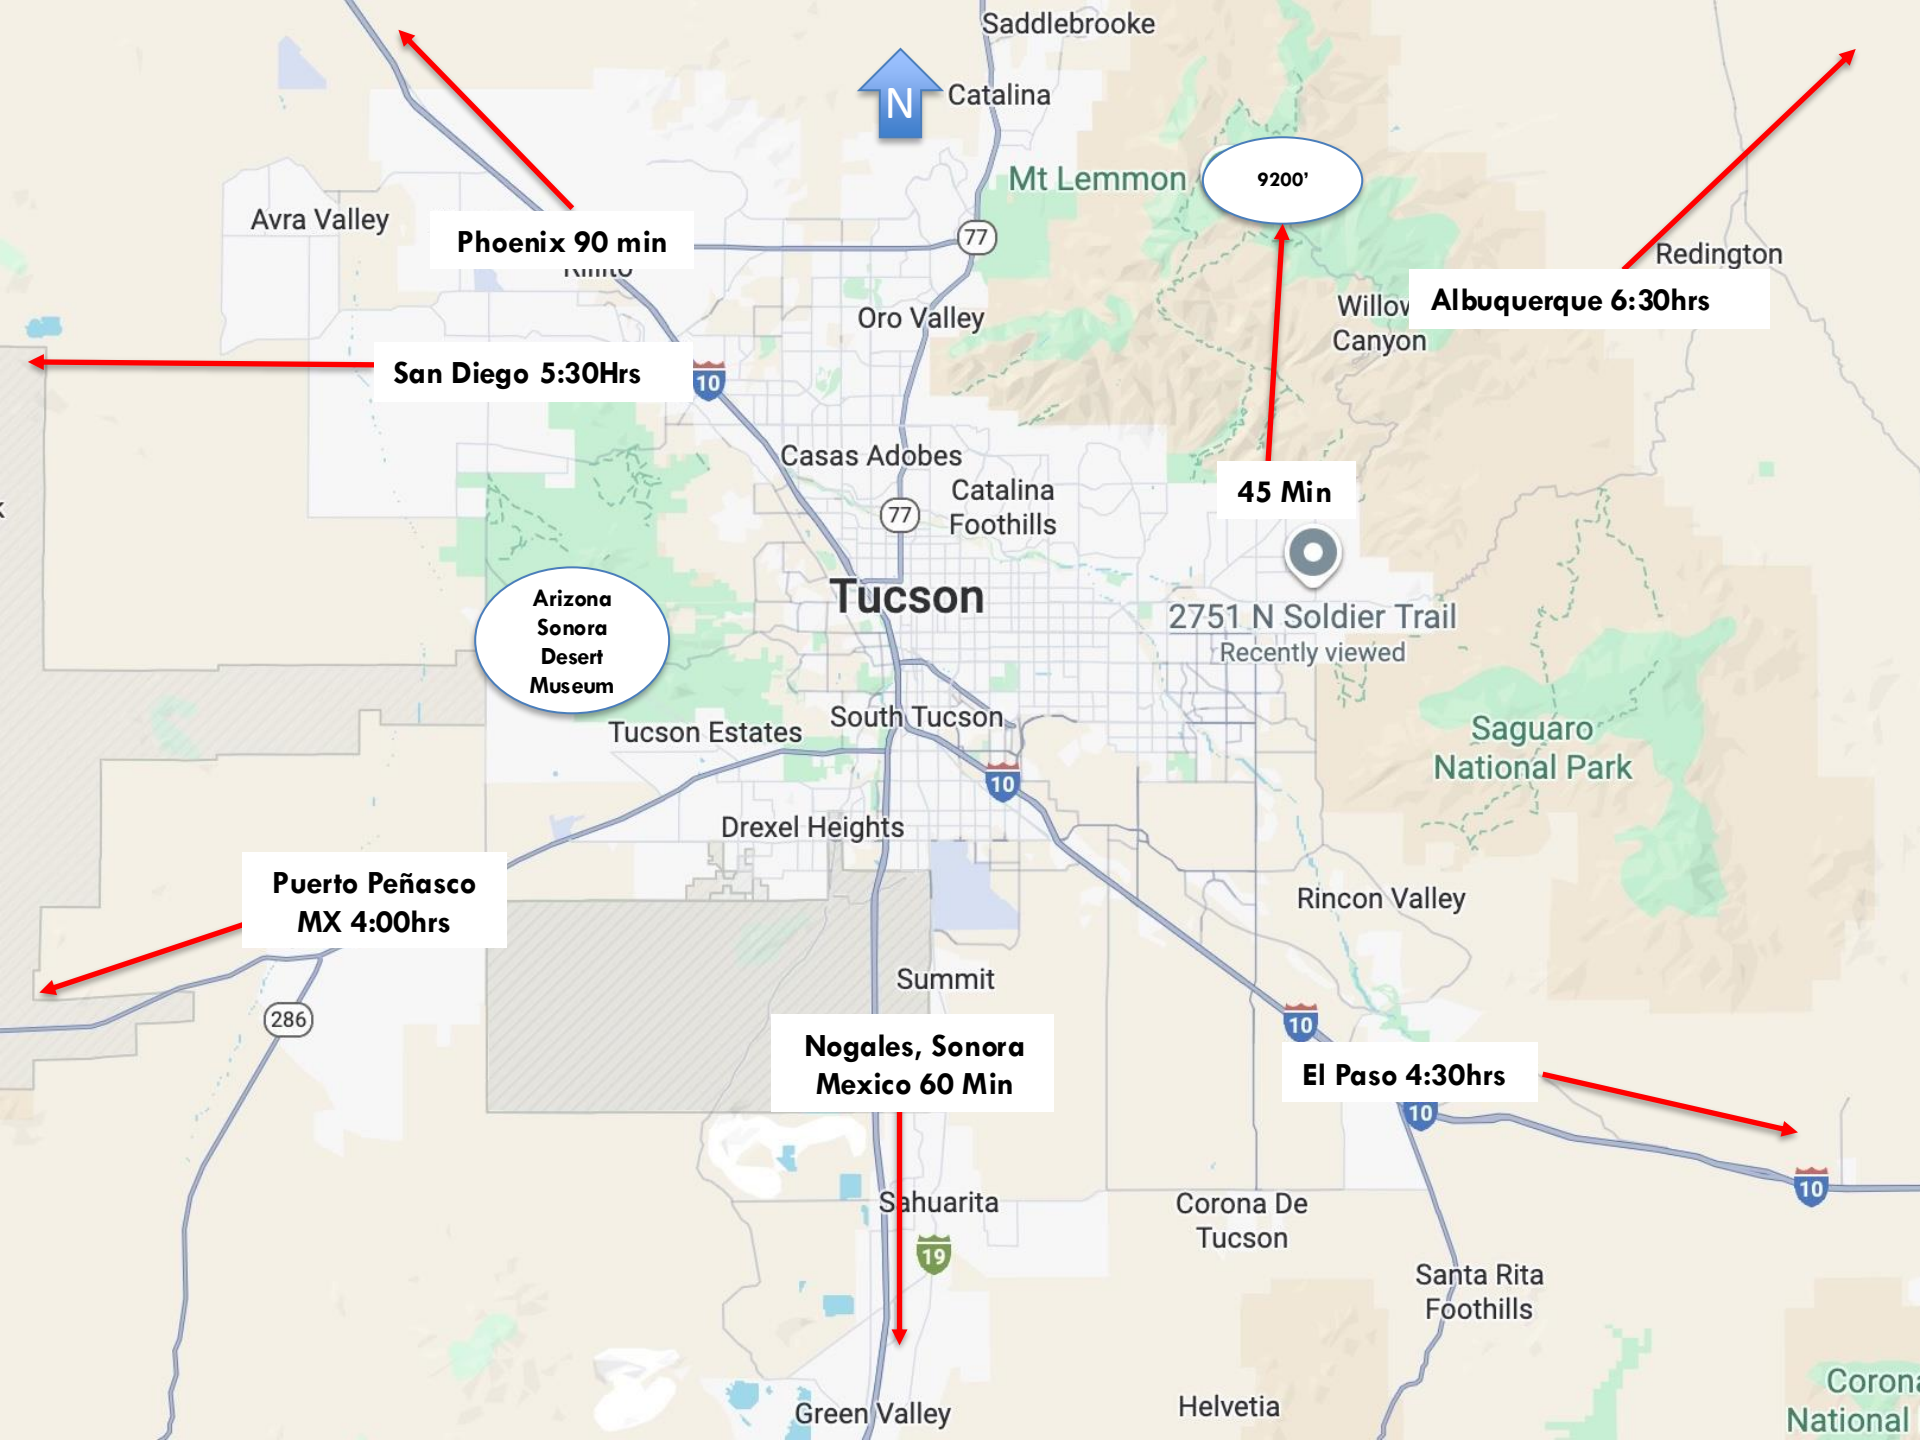

The subject property at 2751 N. Soldier Trail is ideally situated near many of Southern Arizona's most notable natural resources, including the Coronado National Forest, Saguaro National Park, Mount Lemmon, Patagonia Lake, and Parker Canyon Lake. These surrounding landscapes provide immediate access to desert, forest, mountain, and riparian environments, making the location especially well suited for outdoor education, leadership development, and experiential learning programs. With more than 300 days of sunshine annually and mild year-round temperatures, Tucson offers a highly favorable climate for open-air instruction, training, and nature-based programming throughout the year
